Background information:

The Norwegian Directorate of Immigration (UDI) is in the process of reviewing its practice regarding Ethiopian applicants who fear persecution due to their (perceived) political opinion. Updated country information shows that the political situation in Ethiopia has changed considerably over the last 6 months, in particular following the inauguration of the new Prime minister, Abiye Ahmed, in the beginning of April, 2018. Thousands of political prisoners have been released and charges against prominent activists and political opposition leaders have been dropped. The new Prime Minister has introduced several new reforms and has dismissed leaders within the army, the National Intelligence and Security Services as well as prison officials. Several government officials have also been dismissed and the regional President of Ogaden has been arrested and replaced. Parliament formally lifted the terrorist designations from 3 opposition groups making them legal and opening up possibilities for them to participate in the ongoing democratization process in Ethiopia. All of these groups had previously been the targets of counterinsurgency operations by Ethiopian security forces.

In light of the above, UDI would appreciate information on whether EU+ countries have reviewed their asylum practice due to the improved political situation, in particular with regards to applicants (accused of being) connected with the formerly illegal opposition parties (Oromo Liberation Front (OLF), Ginbot 7, Ogaden National Liberation Front (ONLF)). We welcome responses from all EMN member states, but are especially interested in responses from CH, DE, FI, FR, NL, SE, and UK.

Questions

1. Does your MS have applicants who claim fear of persecution due to having been accused of having connections with one of the formerly illegal opposition parties (OLF, Ginbot 7, ONLF)?
YES/ NO
2. Please briefly describe how your MS assessed an applicant's risk of persecution prior to the political changes that took place earlier in 2018 as noted above?
3. Has your MS reviewed, or are there plans to review, your practice/policy related to applicants with such claims given the present situation?
YES/ NO
4. Please describe how your MS assesses an applicant's risk of persecution in light of the fact that these opposition parties no longer are illegal.

	Finland	Yes	1. Yes 2. The assessment is always individual (no binding guidelines exist) and therefore an exact description is difficult to formulate. Some general observations can, however, be concluded. Quite many of the applicants who have claimed they are in danger of persecution due to their (perceived) political opinion have not been able to convincingly demonstrate that they (or e.g. their close family members) have been politically active. In these cases the assessment has regularly resulted in a negative asylum decision. If the situation is the reverse, in other words, if the applicant can demonstrate that he/she (or a close family member/relative) has been active (or is perceived to have been active) in some of the above mentioned parties, the threshold to grant asylum has been quite low. However, demonstrating a mere connection to some of the opposition parties has not generally by itself been sufficient to be granted asylum. 3. (YES) The question has, however, not come up yet. Our practice will be reviewed should an applicant convincingly claim he/she is in danger due to priori political activity. 4. N/A

Generally speaking, Luxembourg treats every international protection application on a case-by-case basis by taking into consideration the facts described by the applicant, the evidence provided and the general situation in the country of origin. This approach is also applied to determine if an applicant faces a risk of persecution due to his actual or perceived affiliation to a political party. Given that prior to the political changes of early 2018 the three opposition groups (OLF, Ginbot 7, ONLF) were designated by the Ethiopian parliament as terrorist organizations, Luxembourg considered that any member or a perceived member in one of the three opposition groups could be at a risk of being subjected to ill-treatment or persecution by state actors or the security forces. Decisive factors in the risk assessment were the level of involvement of the applicant in one of the

			mentioned parties and if his activities were publicly known. Besides this Luxembourg assessed if the applicant was able to prove that he or she was a member or a perceived member in one of the above mentioned opposition groups and participated actively in protests or other political manifestations. 3. Yes. 4. Given the political changes that took place in 2018, the three opposition groups (OLF, Ginbot 7, ONLF) are no longer considered terrorist organisations and its members are no longer targeted by the Ethiopian government. Luxembourg will continue to assess the applicant's risk of persecution as mentioned in Q1 and base its decisions in most cases on the absence of any future risk of persecution due to the political reforms that took place and the beginning political dialogue between the government and the opposition.

			political parties; (b) the release of thousands of political prisoners; (c) the dropping of charges against prominent activists and political opposition leaders; and (d) the dismissal of leaders within the army, the National Intelligence and Security Services as well as prison officials, who were linked to various crimes and abuses against political prisoners and opponents (real or perceived), it would seem that there is no longer a well-founded fear of persecution due to links (real or perceived) with the OLF, Ginbot 7 and ONLF. However, the aforementioned assessment should be seen as a preliminary observation since as indicated in the reply to the previous question a full review of the current situation in Ethiopia vis-à-vis persons who have links (real or perceived) to the OLF, Ginbot 7 and ONLF still needs to be carried out.
	Netherlands	Yes	1. Yes. However, the basis for the asylum claim (e.g. membership of one of the formerly illegal opposition parties) is not registered in the systems of the Immigration and Naturalisation Service (IND). 2. The IND doesn't have specific country policy for Ethiopian asylum seekers. The IND bases asylum applications among other things on the basis of the official country report from the Ministry of Foreign Affairs. The country report about Ethiopia that was used to assess applicant's risk of persecution prior to the political changes in 2018, was from May 2013. In this report, the position of members of the illegal opposition parties (OLF, Ginbot 7, ONLF) are discussed. The Ethiopian authorities consider these parties as terrorist organizations and use repression, intimidation and violence against them to prevent and discourage criticism. Also, alleged members of these parties are arrested and punished without a fair legal process. There are torture practices in some of these cases. Apart from the country report of 2013, the IND also uses more up-to-date reports from public sources. These stem from NGOs like Human Rights Watch and Amnesty International, the UNHCR, or other governments. The security and human rights situation is based on the country report combined with these public reports. The asylum application is then assessed in light of the information about the security and human rights situation in combination with the statements from the alien. If the alien makes it plausible that he is to fear persecution, as meant in the Convention relating to the Status of Refugees, because he is an adherent of an opposition movement or due to political activities, he may be eligible for an asylum residence permit under article 29.A of the

			Aliens Act. 3. No. As explained under question 2, the IND doesn't have specific country policy for Ethiopian asylum seekers and bases its asylum policies on multiple sources, among which the country reports from the Ministry of Foreign Affairs. 4. The asylum application is assessed on the basis of the statements from the alien in light of the (recent) information about the security and human rights situation in Ethiopia. In July 2018, the official report about Ethiopia was updated with regard to the new political situation. This official report describes the current situation in Ethiopia which is significant to the assessment of asylum applications from Ethiopians. The official report discusses the improved political situation under the new president Abiye Ahmed. For instance, Abiye Ahmed removed the ONLF, OLF and Ginbot 7 from the national list of terrorist organizations. However, the report also acknowledges that still thousands of people are imprisoned in Oromia and Amhara. These new developments are taken into account when assessing the asylum application.
	Poland	Yes	1. NO 2. Persons who were able to prove membership/ connections with these parties were granted refugee status. 3. Currently PL doesn't have applicants from Ethiopia that would be claiming fear of persecution on basis of membership or connections to the above mentioned, formerly illegal, parties. However, recent information on reforms applied by the Ethiopian government may justify the revision of policy in the future – with caution and constant monitoring of the situation. 4. PL doesn't have applicants from Ethiopia at the moment – no related applications.
